Lava Shells
reaches milestone

After launching the company six months ago to bring an innovative self-warming treatment to the spa market, Lava Shells is celebrating its 100th partnership. Founders Clare Anderson and Alison Gibbs have now introduced their self-heating shells sourced from the Philippines to 100 clients, including Dove Spas across the UK, Calcot Manor in Gloucestershire and Ragdale Hall in Leicestershire.

The Berkeley finds
its Comfort Zone

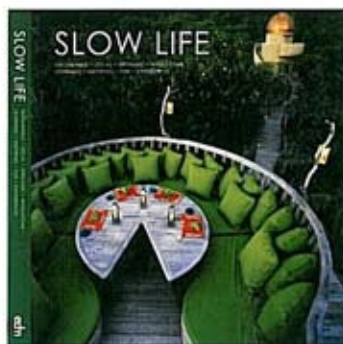

A haven for London's high flyers, The Berkeley spa has teamed up with Comfort Zone to produce a unique treatment menu. The product house has worked closely with The Berkeley's new Spa Manager Karine Venerie to create a quartet of treatments including 'jetsetter' recovery therapies and a 'debutante' facial aimed at members' daughters. The spa, which is currently updating its facilities, also offers a Sacred Space treatment based on Comfort Zone's new organic and natural Sacred Nature line. The full-body exfoliation, massage and hydration sequence was devised by Comfort Zone's National Training Manager Victoria Trueman.

ESM's pick of the latest spa books

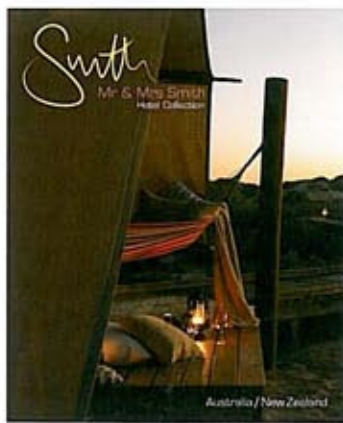

Green inspiration from Six Senses

SLOW LIFE is the latest read from Six Senses, packed full of inspiring information for sustainable living. Written by Kate O'Brien, the book aims to take Six Senses' experience of environmentally aware and healthy living into people's homes and daily regimes. SLOW LIFE – or Sustainable-Local-Organic-Wholesome Learning-Inspiring-Fun-Experiences – also hopes to inspire businesses to embrace a concern for planetary wellbeing in order to generate widespread change.
