UK-based company Shared Beauty Secrets have found an alternative for mobile therapists offering hot stone massage treatments, with their newly sourced Lava Shells from US-based Spa Revolutions. The Lava Shells are versatile massage tools which can be used anywhere and added to any treatment.

The genuine Tiger Striped Clam Shells heat up internally for up to an hour with a patented combination of all natural minerals and water. With just one or two shells, therapists can deliver continuous heat and never lose client contact while giving a massage. Unlike hot stones, the Lava Shells are powered by LavaGel and need no external equipment, electricity or batteries. The LavaGel is a self-heating blend of natural minerals and ingredients including algae and dead sea kelp, that when blended with salt water, generate controlled heat for an hour-long massage.

The Chi Centre has developed and produced Aqua-Clinic, a colon hydrotherapy device to offer clients a mobile colon hydrotherapy service.

mobile therapy

"Starting up a mobile colon hydrotherapy business enables the therapist to provide this rare and valuable service to a larger catchment area and effectively use referrals to build the client base," says Galina Imrie of The Chi Centre.

"You will, obviously, need to be trained and to purchase a portable colon hydrotherapy machine. You will need to check the venue, make sure that you have balanced hot and cold water, choose the rooms that are appropriate for colon hydrotherapy i.e. have washable floors and the toilet!"
